Employer Eligibility: Next Steps

These search results usually only include an organization's official name and its official address. For more details on this employer's eligibility, make sure to click the information icon on the right side of the status box below.

If your employer is listed as eligible or split for PSLF, you should proceed to the PSLF Help Tool and begin the application process (the information entered here will not carry over). If your employer is listed as ineligible, undetermined, or not listed, remember that our database may be incomplete and your employer may still qualify for PSLF.

Why is My Employer's Eligibility Split?

Your employer's eligibility for Public Service Loan Forgiveness (PSLF) can be different depending on their status (eligible, undetermined, or ineligible).

An example of a split status might include organizations that switched between a for-profit and nonprofit status. It can also include organizations that formed, merged, or closed after the PSLF Program began in 2007.

If periods of your employer's eligibility for PSLF are undetermined, a case will be created when you submit this employer through the PSLF Help Tool. Your employment certification will not be processed until we have completed a review of your case and reached a decision about your employer's PSLF eligibility.

Below are the time periods and eligibility statuses for PSLF during the dates you provided.
